Disabled Children

Islington Children's Services have agreed the following working definition in relation to childhood disability.

A child should be regarded as disabled if he or she has special needs in the area of health, education, or physical, intellectual, emotional, social, or behavioural development due to any of the disability categories listed below that are:

Substantial, with a marked adverse impact on daily life and unlikely to be able to participate in normal activities for the foreseeable future;

and /or

Where a child's normal development is significantly impaired and they need to receive significantly more personal care and supervision than children without disabilities of similar

Disability categories

Multiple and complex health needs

Sensory impairment such as hearing loss, visual

A significant learning disability

A physical disability

A chronic physical illness

Autism (Autistic Spectrum Disorder) and

A significant developmental delay

Guidance

Not all conditions and disorders are included. Those that are not covered include social and emotional difficulties, dyslexia and attention deficit disorder.

A child refers to any child or young person from the age of 0 – 19 who is living in or the responsibility of Islington.

The Disability Discrimination Act 2005 says that:

Substantial means neither minor nor trivial

Normal activities include everyday things like eating, walking, washing and going shopping
